5. Edison

Edison's first invention: 5, 7, 2, 4, 1, 8, 3, 6

When Edison was a boy of fifteen, he worked as a telegraph operator. He had to be on duty from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. and give a signal every hour to prove that he was awake. One night an inspector arrived and saw Edison sleeping in a chair. He was about to shake him when he caught sight of a mechanism on a table near the telegraph instrument. He waited to see what happened. When the hand of the clock pointed to the hour, the instrument got busy and one lever threw open the key while the other sent the signal over the wire. The inspector seized the sleeping fellow, roused him, and fired him. That is why the first of Edison's numerous inventions was never patented.
