Don't go to bed or you may lose customers!

DC Hilton was one of the first Americans to find out that there was money to be made in the middle of the night

42 years ago he bought a small restaurant on US highway 69, in Oklahoma. His main customers were truck drivers and travelling salesmen who drank coffee and ate cheeseburgers when they stopped to break their journey.

It was they who first tried to persuade Hilton to stay open all night. He thought about it for a while, and then suddenly made up his mind . He took the door key and threw it across the road. He hasn't closed the door since.

Over the years his simple burger café has expanded into a roadside empire, with a 100-seat restaurant, a petrol station, a mini shopping market, a park for mobile homes and all-night launderette.

Hilton was a pioneer in a 24-hour working trend which has now caught on around the world. Today not only restaurants but also banks, supermarkets, mail-order firms, travel agencies and many other businesses are beginning to stay open all night. But is this really a good thing?

A lot of research has been done in America on the effect of 24-hour working, and there is growing concern about the long-term dangers of a society that doesn't sleep. Americans are said to be sleeping 20% less than they did 100 years ago, and 55% claim to suffer at least occasionally from chronic tiredness. Several of the worst man-made disasters, including Chernobyl and the Bhopal chemical disaster in India, happened in the last few hours before dawn, when even the most experienced night-worker has difficulty staying awake.

Dear Lenore,

I've been in N.Y. for three weeks already. I'm staying at my friend Sue's apartment near Columbia University. Her apartment's really nice, but last week someone broke into it and stole her TV, radio and some jewelry. She had insurance, so she'll get her money back for the things they took. But now I'm afraid to be alone here.

I've been looking at a lot of apartments. It's too expensive to live by myself, so I'm going to share an apartment with a friend of Sue's. We found a pretty nice apartment yesterday. It's really dirty and needs painting, but once we've fixed it up, it will be O.K.

I think I'm going to like N.Y. It has lots of problems – the crime, the dirty streets and crowded subways – but it's exciting. I've already been to a few free concerts and I've seen a fantastic dance group called The Dance Theatre of Harlem. They're a group of black dancers who do both modern dance and ballet.

The only real problem I have is with Dave. He didn't want me to move into the city and he hasn't called me since I left Winfield. He thinks my career is more important to me than he is, but that's not true. We can still see each other often. He works in the city too and we can meet after work. Also, I'll be going to Winfield for the weekends. I don't think there's a problem, but Dave doesn't agree. I miss him and I hope we can work things out.

I hope you're fine. Say hello to your family for me.

Since I'm working as a ticket agent, I can travel cheaply. Maybe I'll be able to visit you during my vacation.

Love,
Liz
